Andean Health: Patient Care from Hospitals to Community Clinics in Quito, Ecuador
Experience the rich culture and history of Ecuador’s vibrant capital city, Quito, while learning about the healthcare challenges facing the region. One of CFHI’s longest-running programs, the Andean Health program offers a comprehensive learning experience that encompasses both unique cultural opportunities and the chance to work at a variety of clinical sites. This program offers participants a holistic view of the public & private healthcare systems in Quito as well as how the general population accesses healthcare services in the bustling Andean metropolis.

Primary Care and Social Medicine in Cordoba, Argentina
This program is located in Cordoba, the second largest city in Argentina. Program participants will rotate in a variety of clinics and hospitals and witness government efforts to provide care to a large percentage of the population without health insurance. Participants will partake in daily care of patients with family care practitioners. Other opportunities include clinical rotations in other departments such as pediatrics, ophthalmology, dentistry, psychology and social services.

Pediatric and Adolescent Health in La Paz, Bolivia
La Paz, Bolivia is an excellent setting for studying the challenges facing the Bolivian healthcare system in delivering services to children under the age of five through Bolivia’s Universal Maternal and Child Healthcare Plan (SUMI). CFHI’s long standing relationship with the main children’s hospital in La Paz, Hospital del Nino, provides an outstanding learning experience for 3rd and 4th year medical students. While the Bolivian government has made great strides in improving healthcare for children, the history of poverty in this country and lack of education have proven to be challenging obstacles. Students will witness the socio-economic barriers and the efforts of Bolivian healthcare professionals to overcome them.

Healthcare Challenges in Cape Town, South Africa
Experience the healthcare challenges facing South Africa first-hand, where under the Apartheid regime, the vast majority of people had limited or non-existent healthcare until the 1990s. Since then, South Africa's health care system has made great strides under majority rule, especially in its efforts to reach underserved communities. Participants will get an opportunity to understand how the health care system has dealt with a public health crisis that has fundamentally altered the state’s social and economic fabric through the Healthcare Challenges program, senior level clinical students will rotate alongside physicians at a local hospital, located in the southern suburbs of Cape Town in Wynberg.
