Call for Nominations:
UCSF Excellence and Innovation in Graduate Medical Education

Dear all:

I am pleased to announce the second annual UCSF Excellence and Innovation in Graduate Medical Education Awards. These awards recognize 1) a program coordinator or other GME administrative staff; 2) a faculty member (including program directors, associate program directors, etc); and 3) a resident or fellow for exemplary efforts to improve graduate medical education at UCSF.

Nominees will have demonstrated a commitment to advancing graduate medical education at UCSF through educational and clinical quality improvement, service excellence, and innovation.

Examples of excellence and innovation might include:

- Demonstrated educational leadership in his/her department, at UCSF, and/or nationally;
- Participation in innovative GME-related projects (ie development of curriculum, QI projects, evaluations, etc.);
- Extraordinary efforts to address resident/fellow needs;
- Other contributions to improving graduate medical education at UCSF and/or nationally.

Nominations should be submitted to Andrea Cunningham (CunninghamA@medsch.ucsf.edu) by Friday, May 16, 2014. Nominations should include at least two letters that highlight the nominee’s achievements, service excellence, and innovation in GME. The letters may be from department and program leadership, faculty and staff, and/or residents and fellows.

The three awards will be publicly presented on June 16 at a special GME reception.

Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks!
